CANNES, THE CHALLENGE OF THE FUTURE

"In Cannes, life is a festival":

Cannes and its festivals cannot be dissociated. And yet their appeal would be lesser if Cannes did not possess all the traits which beguiled Lord Brougham last century and all those princes, artists, high cosmopolitan society, the great names of this world... who made it their preferred stopover: the Mediterranean, the climate, its light of course, but also the site in a unique bay, in an amphitheater of hills and mountains, and incomparable hospitality an graciousness.

The International Film Festival introduced Cannes into the realm of recreation and audiovisual communication, and gave it the notoriety we all know of.

The city of Cannes was able to grasp this chance and to acquire a host structure which, from the Palais des Festivals et des Congrès to its incomparable hotel fleet, can live up to the cinematographic "event" and to events of all kinds, which have made Cannes today the 2nd congressional city in France, throughout the year, immediately after Paris.

Business tourism has become an essential complement to the tourist trade, and the two together constitute Cannes' major economic activity. A tourist vocation which Cannes does not wish to rely on solely.

Fifteen kilometers from the town, Sophia-Antipolis, the "Cité des Sciences et de la Sagesse" (City of Science and Wisdom) the "Technopole du Soleil" (Technopolis of the Sun) which celebrated its 20th anniversary in 1989 and today accommodates, on 4 600 acres, more than 830 firms, company names and research organizations employing some 15 000 persons in peak sectors, exercises an unquestionable influence on the city of Cannes.

Cannes is relying on this proximity, its international image and an exceptional geographical location, communication axes and a guest infrastructure which is being improved constantly, to bring the tourist economy the essential complementarity of enterprise in these peak domains, among which the Aérospatiale is the city's pride.

The improvement and development of the city's infrastructure decided on by the municipal government, also strive for a diversification of the activities and the adaptation of its equipment to meet demand.

Thus, by the beginning of next century, the film capital of the world will be equipped with a Mediapole which will house, to the west of the city, in La Bocca, the University of the Trades of image and sound, the Regional Actors School, a complex of studios and sets designed for film production, and The Senior School of Dance and the Regional Provence-Côte d'Azur Orchestra.

The area west of Cannes should also be the site of an Exhibition Hall of 30,000 square meters on the grounds of the Cannes-Mandelieu Airport.

All this work, an may more projects still, will be performed in total respect of the environment, in an effort to improve it.

Indeed, Cannes is one of the few municipal governments to have crested an Environmental Agency (Direction de l'Environnement et du Cadre de Vie) whose missions are:

- to assist in decision-making in the domain of planning and development, while seeing that economic development is always associated with the quality of life.

- to enhance the natural environment (the replanting of posidonia in the bay of Cannes, creation of the Croix des Gardes Park...).

- to organize campaigns to heighten the publics awareness (quality of the water, noise, recovery of waist...)

CANNES HOTEL TRADE
INNOVATION AND TRADITION

133 hotels, more than 5 000 rooms, 3 000 seasonal rentals and approximately 2 500 apartments in its 17 hotel-related residences ! Cannes offers exceptional accommodation possibilities in all categories

For more than a century, Cannes has vested all its know-how in the art of hospitality. 1870, the Second Empire crumbled, but paradoxically, a formidable prosperity took over Europe, causing the sudden popularity Côte d'Azur. In 1870, here were some 30 hotels in Cannes.

London's elite, in the manner of the Lord Chancellor of England, Lord Brougham, had been a regular visitor to Cannes for the past thirty years... Paris' elite was to follow... in other words the entire world came to experience the gentle climate of Cannes winters.

Seven years later, more than 50 hotels existed. This was the period when Cannes resigned itself, as the poet Liégeard who christened our region «Côte d'Azur » wrote, to cashing in on its sunshine: palaces, hotels, villas abounded at the heart of its gardens, in the secrecy of its tiny streets, in the middle of its splendid parks, along the Croisette.

Some palaces built at the beginning of the century are still standing: the Carlton, the Majestic and the Martinez, all names which evoke the world over the concepts of luxury, prestige and the art of entertaining « à la française ».

The beginning of the 80's witnessed the proliferation of new establishments in the closed world of these luxury hotels, compelling them to make major renovations: modern rooms, spas, pools, terrace restaurants, seminar rooms and reception halls... Cannes' palaces put on a new face and are the city's pride and joy.

With more than 2 000 rooms, i.e. almost one half of Cannes' hotel fleet, the 4* and Luxury hotels are open all year round to all styles of vacationers, with their special rates offered for sports, gastronomy and leisure... and for congresses and seminars, thus marking Cannes the second luxury hotel capital of France after Paris.

Requirements

• At least 1,500 first-class hotel rooms (including Headquarters Hotel) will be available within a five-mile radius of the Headquarters Hotel.
• Cannes Junior Chamber has reserved rooms (including the Headquarters Hotel) actually committed for the Congress per attached letter of Commitment and hotel list from Novatours.
• 100 rooms from the total at the Headquarters Hotel are to be made available exclusively to JCI for assignment by the JCI Secretary General. The expenses for the use of these rooms shall be the obligation of the persons to whom they are assigned, unless they are "free" rooms offered for the use of JCI. All rooms paid by JCI will be offered at fhe "net" (non-commissionable) rate.
Allocation of these rooms and the release of those not required shall be confirmed by the JCI Secretary General to Cannes Junior Chamber. 30 days prior to the opening date of Congress or by such date as the Headquarters Hotel may require, but no more than 45 days prior to the opening of the Congress,
• Cannes Junior Chamber has reserved and will pay for suite accommodations in the Headquarters Hotel for the stay of the JCI President and spouse and for the JCI Secretary General and spouse. Accommodation in respect of the President and JCI Secretary General will commence approximately, but not more than, 7 days prior to the first Executive Committee Meeting and terminate approximately, but not more than 7 days after the final PostCongress meeting.

CANNES, CITY OF CONGRESSES
LE PALAIS DES FESTIVALS

CANNES, CITY OF CONGRESSES

The International Film Festival has made Cannes an international star. However, far from settling for this status-quo, Cannes has managed to multiply its assets to become France's second center of congresses, exhibitions and Incentives, after Paris.

Now, it is the annual meeting place of professions in the fields of television, film, recording and real estate, the leader of computer shows, a privileged center for launching luxury products (from automobiles to perfume associated with its prestigious image), the beacon destination of high-end international shows, medical and high technology congresses, as well as trips for incentive and reward.

A success made possible due to an incomparable aura, an exceptional environment, multiple, easy accesses, a Palais des Festivals et des Congrès which is one of a kind, an hotel infrastructures adapted to all needs.

In short, in CANNES, everything is thought out, elaborated, constructed, organized for hospitality, amusement and attractiveness.

Business tourism in figures: Cannes, second city in France (second only to Paris): 412 events per year.

LE PALAIS DES FESTIVALS

Le Palais, which opened its doors in 1982, is built on the sea front, on the Croisette close to the Vieux-Port, exactly where Cannes of the past meets modern-day Cannes. It has replaced its predecessor whose facilities could no longer keep up with Cannes' development and its cultural and tourist activities.

Designed from the outset in close collaboration with the organizers of Cannes major events, all has been provided for hosting events which require both large exhibition and reception areas and meeting rooms displaying peak technology.

Few Palais in Europe offer under the same roof more than 16 800 square meters in exhibit space, an auditorium which can seat 2 325, a theater which can accommodate an audience of 1 000 persons, 15 conference rooms with 40 to 300 seats, a reception hall overlooking the bay of Cannes which can accommodate 3000 persons in cocktail parties and 1 200 for seated dinners and luncheons, radio and television studios, a loading area, a 950-car parking lot...

Henri Céran, Commercial Director of the SEMEC describes the Palais: «the Palais, due to its design, has made Cannes the foremost destination for high-end international exhibitions. Our policy is to invest continuously in the decoration and development of new surfaces to meet an increasing demand. In addition to the major events which occupy even the most remote corners of the entire Palais such as the MIDEM, the flexibility of the space allows us to offer a large numbers of combinations which always offer meeting rooms, exhibition foyers and areas with their own access. This flexibility in its use is what attracts organizers. We are able to welcome several events simultaneously without any of them disturbing the others".

Cannes's major asset is the proximity of the Palais to the hotels, enabling participants to walk from their hotel along the sea to the Palais. The atmosphere of the event as a whole benefits from this: conviviality, relaxation, exchange and for the organizer the economy of an entire shuttle system which weighs heavily upon a budget.

CANNES AN INTERNATIONAL CROSSROADS

At the heart of Southern Europe, Cannes is at an international crossroads where numerous, easy access routes place it just a few hours away from a great number of world capitals.

BY AIR

Cannes is served by the Nice Côte d'Azur Airport, the second largest in France, located 27 kilometers away. The turnpike provides easy access to Cannes. Regular bus shuttles provide 30-minute travel and 6-minute helicopter service is available.

Paris is 1 h 15 minutes away by air, with flights every hour.

Direct flights connect the Côte d'Azur to the principal cities of Europe, Africa, the Middle East, and the United States. Direct flights to New York.

Cannes also has its own airdrome, 5 kilometers from the center of town, the first in the provinces for non-commercial traffic.

BY ROAD

Road networks, including the N7 in particular, are facilitated by turnpike A8 "the Esterel Côte d'Azur" which links Cannes to the European turnpike network and serves Cannes via two exits whose access is very easy.

BY TRAIN

The railway station is at the heart of the city, a few steps away from La Croisette

For large, international trains, Cannes is an unavoidable halt, and until the special High Speed Train (T.G.V.) shortens travel time between Cannes and Paris to four hours in 1997, the rails of the bullet train takes you from Cannes to Paris in 6h30 minutes.

BY SEA

4 ports can accommodate approximately 20 000 pleasure boats.
The restructuring of the Port of Cannes will soon enable it to welcome a greater number of pleasure boats, as well as oceans-going cruisers.

WANDERING THROUGH THE STREETS OF CANNES

The heart of Cannes is made for pedestrians.

From rue Meynadier to the Forville market, the inhabitants of Cannes assure us of our money's worth, because the show is free. There is a feast for the eyes, the nose, the ears one of the most beautiful markets of the region with the rock fish that ends up in its famous bouillabaisse, the incredible diversity of vegetables and herbs of Provence, the flowers gathered in the surrounding hills, a market in which local residents merge with the cosmopolitan flow of tourists.

LE SUQUET: is Cannes' history. With approximately ten tiny streets, it covers the former "Castrum de Canoïs", founded by the Romans. Make sure to visit the Tour Sarrazine, Notre-Dame de l'Espérance, a XVIIth century church, and Sainte-Anne's Chapel, built in sumptuous view from the Estérel to the golf course of La Napoule, and of the entire city with a magnificent map in relief. Many stores and restaurants beckon you along the medieval vaulted walkways of Le Suquet. As you go down this thoroughfare, stop on the Old Port and await the arrival of the nonchalant pointus (fishing boats) on the Quai Saint Pierre, or take a sea-excursion on one of the cruisers belonging to the Société Cannoise Maritime de Navigation.

On Saturdays, be sure not to miss the antique fair, under the sycamores along the Allées de la Liberté-Charles de Gaulle, also a choice meeting place for "pétanque" players.

A shopping guide for Cannes would be superfluous. The Rue d'Antibes-Galerie du Gray d'Albion-Croisette circuit is like Paris' Faubourg St. Honoré in the sunshine with an "Azurian" welcome to boot. The most elegant windows await you: from high fashion design to the last creation of the stylists and including jewelry, perfumes, design, chocolate makers... More than 2 700 boutiques to beguile you.

LA CROISETTE of course...: From the Palm Beach at the Eastern end to the Palais des Festivals at the West, the Croisette was the boulevard of kings... and of gamblers, at the turn of the century. Today, it is the most international promenade in the world, with its city side, lined in palace-hotels, the café terraces, prestigious malls and stores, and on its beach side with its restaurants, its benches and its chairs, its ice cream vendors, its news stands. Between the two lanes of automobile traffic, the alleys of palm trees, its gardens in bloom with rare, endlessly renewed fragrances forming a border of greenery and color which is a tribute to the city's 160 gardeners.

L'ALLEE DES ETOILES DU CINEMA Cannes, world capital of film has immortalized since May 1985 the celebrities of this 7th art who attend the International Film Festival. Indeed, on the Président Georges Pompidou Esplanade, at the entrance of the Palais des Festivals et des Congrès, film stars are invited to leave the imprint of their hands and their signature in the slabs designed to pave the Allée des Etoiles du Cinéma. Alain Delon, Robert de Niro, Gina Lollobrigida, Gérard Depardieu, Jane Fonda, and almost 200 other actors and directors have been immortalized on the palace steps.

THE LERINS ISLANDS: Well known to sailors of all times, the Lérins Islands have a past rich with vestiges and legends. They are less than 15 minutes from Cannes by boat, and offer above all an opportunity to linger for those who like walking, swimming fishing, and suntanning... or eating fish and seafood.

WANDERING THROUGH THE STREETS OF CANNES

SAINT HONORAT ISLAND: This island, slightly over 1 kilometer in length and 700 meters wide, bears the name of a hermit monk who settled there in around 400 and founded a monastery which was one of the most famous in Gaul. A pilgrimage to the island's monastery is a must. It is owned by the monks of the Cistercian Sénanque congregation which has maintained a very active abbey there since 1869, farming lavender, vineyards, orange orchards, harvesting honey and producing a delicious liqueur "Lérina". You will visit the Neo-Roman church and the Monastery's lapidary museum. A sheltered alley of eucalyptus trees fragrant with the most varied essences will lead you around the island up to the ancient fortified monastery built during the XI th century, from which will discover the magnificent view.

On SAINTE MARGUERITE ISLAND, which is 3 200 meters long and 950 wide, you will visit Fort Royal, built under Richelieu, to defend the shores of Provence, fortified by the Spaniards during the Thirty Years war, then revamped by Vauban in 1712 and finally restored by Napoleon. Famous prisoners were incarcerated here. In 1687, through the castle's monumental gate, the most famous of them entered, bearing an iron mask. Was he Louis XIV's twin or adulterate brother ? The lover of Queen Marie-Thérèse?

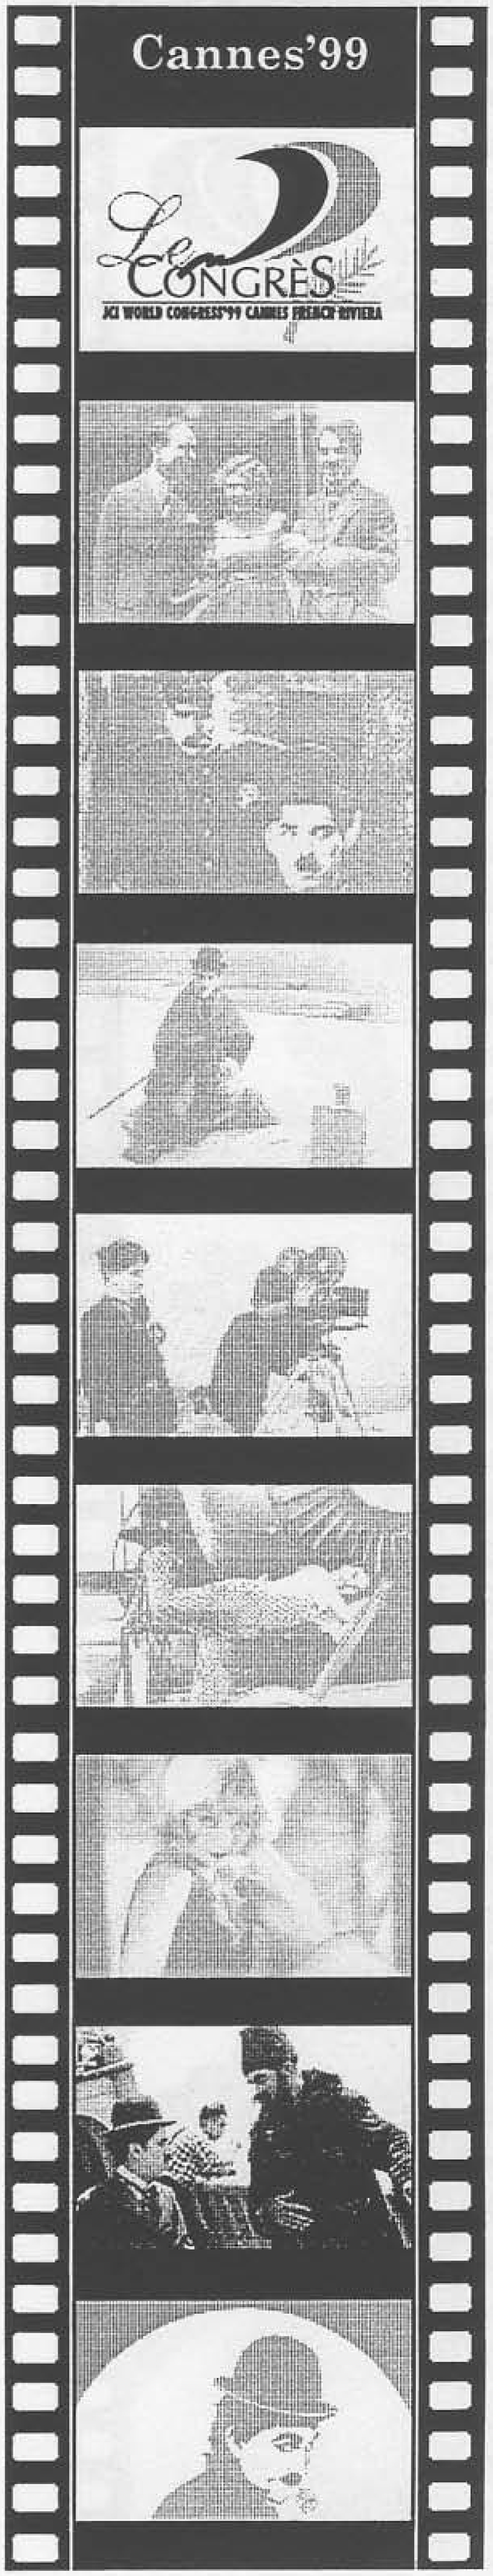

Today, restored and equipped by the city of Cannes, the summer Fort has been transformed into a recreational activity center that is open to young people of all nationalities and houses the museum of the sea and maritime adventure. Moreover, the island is a first-ranking botanical and ornithological reservation. It's Batéguier lake, fed in fresh water by an Artesian well, is a stop-over for migrating birds. A track runs round the island and gives access to sheltered coves.

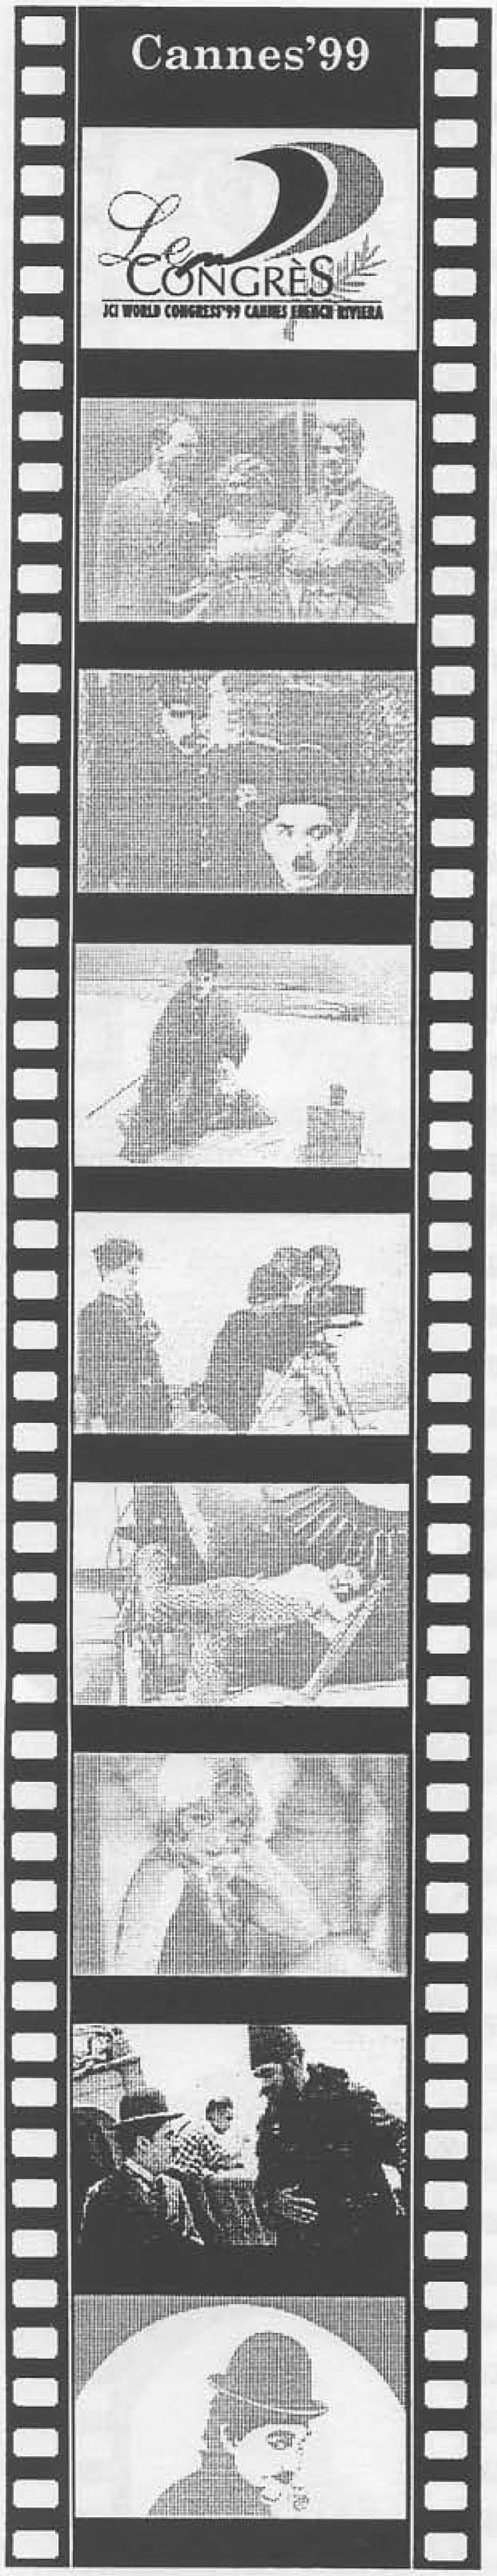

Back on the continent, discover the hills of Cannes.

To the West, the Croix des Gardes hill offers avid hikers a remarkable view encompassing the Lérins islands and the Estérel mountain range. A its peak stands a landmark, a cross measuring 12-meters by 6, built by the sculptor Lechevallier which has recently replaced the more modest cross after which the Hill was named.

To the East, not far from its center, Cannes has the privilege of owning a large wooded range, the Californie, which is extended by Super-Cannes and enables those who venture this far to contemplate, here again, the Bay of Cannes. Here we experience the kingdom of maritime pine trees, cork-oaks, arbutus, mimosa and eucalyptus trees which lend such fragrance to the vagabond roads which wander through these hills in their capricious meanders.

Many treks can be made to discover examples of contrasting architecture, from the old houses of Le Suquet to the imposing structures of the Croisette, from NotreDame d'Espérance Church, a typical illustration of the Provençal Gothic style to the stately Carlton or the dozens of luxury homes built from the second half of the XIX th century onwards whose arcades, towers, volute staircases, columned drawing rooms... lend Cannes its incomparable character. Hikers may continue their trek towards the Estérel Mountain Range to the West of Cannes, which appears to dive into the sea as it is nibbled away by sea coves.

WANDERING THROUGH THE STREETS OF CANNES

THE SITES OF THE HINTERLAND: It wooed be unfortunate not to extend your stay in Cannes to visit the famous towns and villages of the Hinterland or the Cost: Biot and its glass works; Grasse famous for perfume in all languages, Mougins, a lovely provençal village overlooking Cannes, St. Paul de Vence, city of artists and home of the Maeght Foundation, Gourdon, a beguiling village sitting like an eagle's nest; Vallauris, center of hand-made pottery.... and why not go as far as Antibes, Nice, Monaco or Menton ?

CANNES CLIMATE

The great artists of the world weren't mistaken.

What other place in the world offers this sun-drenched light, this exceptional combination of seashore and mountains, this luscious vegetation and these radiant touches of flowers blooming between blue sky and blue sea, this gentle climate, this air heavy with fragrance.

The city of sunlight and warmth: such is Cannes, which enjoys an exceptional climate within a region, the Côte d'Azur, which is privileged as a whole.

In Cannes the average annual temperature is approximately 16,5° Celsius, and goes back up to 15° Celsius in the spring, 23° in the summer months and drops to 17,5° in the autumn. This represents a difference of 12,5° between the winter and summer averages. The annual number of hours of sunlight, which is very high reaches 3 000 hours, i.e. approximately 300 days.

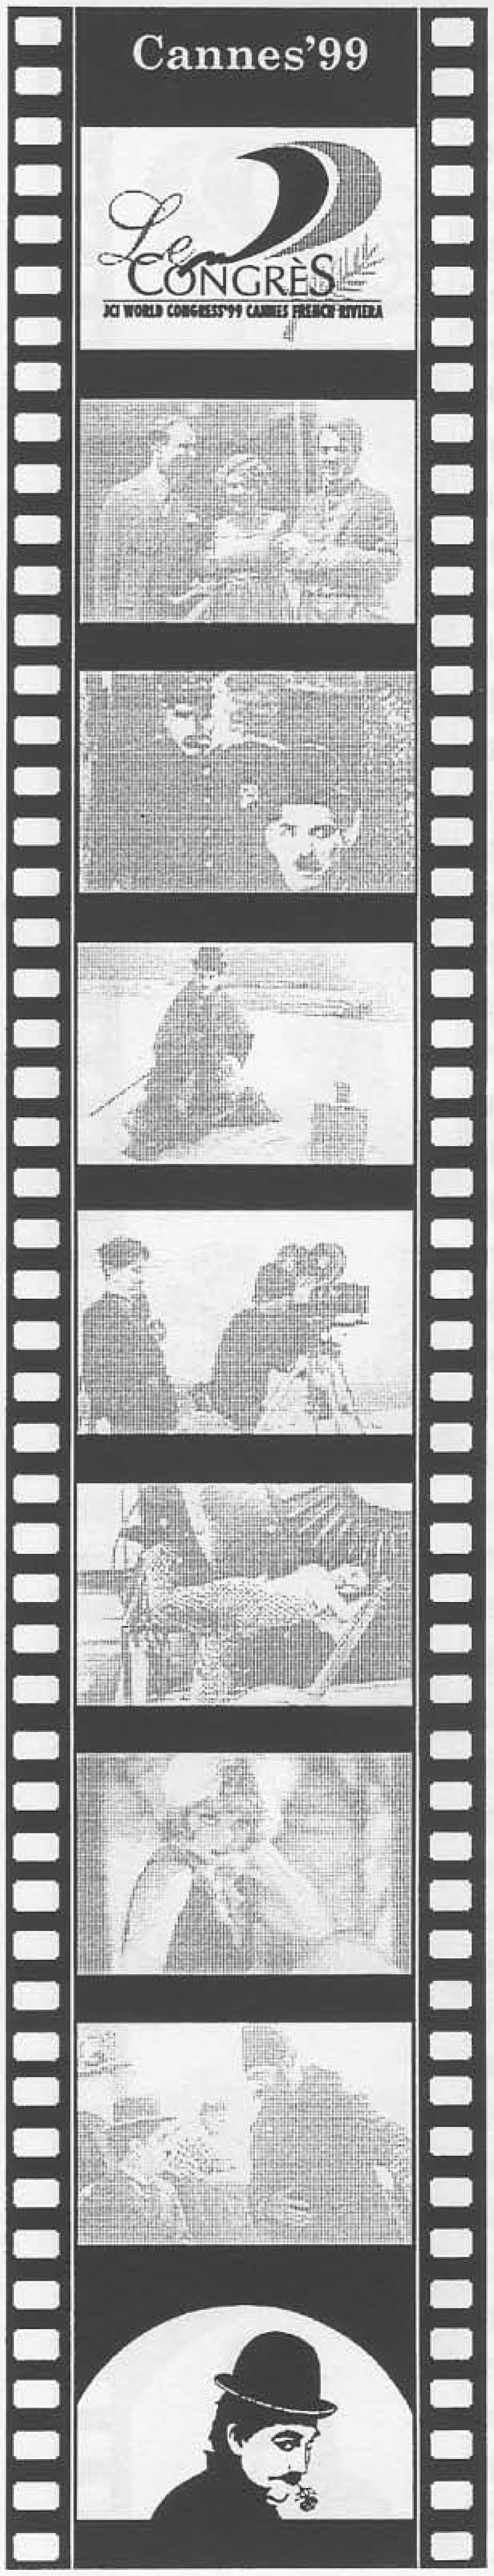

Rainfall is rare and short-lived, but heavy. Fog is unheard of Cannes.

Oriented toward the South, and therefore the Sun, an amphitheater of hills and mountains shelters the city from continental winds. Dominant winds blows from the North, the South-East, the East and the North-East. Eastern and South-Easterly winds bearing rain prevail during equinoctial periods. The Mistral has very little influence here.
